GIVE ME YOUR INPUT:

Please email me your response to the following scenarios:

- The FAA wants to perform a random ramp check at the airport. As a private airport you may grant or deny permission to randomly ramp check the airport. What would you do as the Airport Manager? Allow or Disallow the random ramp check?
- Air Traffic Control calls you on the phone and asks you to identify the aircraft that just landed and have the pilot call them. What would you do? Tell the pilot to call the FAA and provide him the phone number, disregard or give the information out over the phone to the controller?
- The TSA wants unlimited access to the airport hangar area at any time without notice or your knowledge. What would you do?
 - Give the TSA a gate code for access and allow them unlimited access?
 - Tell the TSA that this is private property without government funding and that the airport will grant permission to access on a per time basis with knowledge of the request in advance unless it is an emergency.
 - Tell the TSA to shove it, that they have no authority over private businesses.
- The FAA is seeking information about the number of aircraft based at the airport. In addition, the FAA wants to know the number of planes based at the airport and the category class and type of plane and the registration number of each plane. What would you do?
 - Give them what they want except for the registration of the plane.

- Give the FAA everything they want.
 - Get permission from your customers to give out their registration to the FAA.
 - Stonewall the FAA.
- The Secret Service calls and says that an aircraft that just landed violated a TFR over the airport. They want to know all about it over the phone.
 - Give them all the information they want over the phone.
 - Tell them that you can't give out that information over the phone without proper identification but that you will provide it to a properly identified agent.
 - Call the owner of the plane and let him/her handle it.
 - Tell the Secret Service that that's not your problem.

Please email me your answers. The resolution to each situation will be published in next month's newsletter. If you answer each one as what the Airport actually did, you will win a $50 gift certificate for use at the Airport- first come basis.

Thank you,
Woody Lesikar
